Typical Use

Load only the front third of the bristles, wipe the excess on the rim of the tin, and draw the brush across the board in long, parallel strokes from one edge to the other. Finish each section with light strokes in the same direction so brush marks level out, and work the paint carefully around the edges and corners of the panel. The 50-60mm width covers a large board quickly while still being narrow enough for slates and frame edges.

Clean the brush immediately after use with the cleaning method printed on the paint label, reshape the bristles and let it dry hanging or lying flat so they stay straight for the next job. Schools carrying out a classroom or school lab renovation in India usually keep a few brushes with the paint stock so boards can be refreshed during each long holiday.
