What Are Flipchart Markers Used For?

Flipcharts remain a staple in classrooms, staff training and community education sessions, especially where there is no projector. With four colours a presenter can separate headings, key points, diagrams and emphasis on one sheet, and a science teacher can draw a large circuit, food chain or results table that stays pinned to the wall for the rest of the topic.

Because the ink does not soak through, you can write on a sheet while it is still on the pad without marking the page beneath, and the fast-drying ink smudges less when sheets are torn off and hung up. Replace the cap straight after use so the tip does not dry out. Health educators also pair these markers with a health education kit for school sessions, where large, clear charts help a group follow along.

What to Specify When Ordering

- Number of 4-colour packs required
- Writing surface: the markers are listed for flipchart paper; mention if you also plan to use them on whiteboards so suitability can be confirmed
- Delivery destination for the quotation
