What Is the Size 3 Football Used For?

Many schools do not have a grass pitch, and a normal football scuffs quickly on tarmac or concrete. A rubber ball built for hard surfaces gives young children a football they can use every day in the playground: first touches with the inside of the foot, stopping a rolling ball, dribbling around markers, and short shots at small goals.

The smaller size 3 ball is easier for young legs to control and less intimidating than a full-size ball, which keeps early games focused on fun and technique. Check the ball’s pressure before each lesson, brush or rinse off grit after play on gravel, and keep it indoors between sessions so the rubber is not left in strong sun.

Manufacturer

Jain Scientific Equipments Private Limited, whose trading name is ScienceLab, manufactures this hard surface football in Ambala, Haryana, for schools and early-years programmes that need durable playground equipment. The ball can be ordered with a pump, markers and softer balls for the youngest children so that one delivery equips the whole play area. Company information is on our company profile.
