What Are Woven Surgical Trousers Used For?

Woven surgical trousers are the everyday lower garment in operating theatres, intensive care units, labour rooms and dressing clinics, and nursing and allied-health students often wear them on clinical placements. Because they are laundered and autoclaved rather than thrown away, a hospital can keep a rotating stock of scrub sets instead of relying on disposable clothing.

Plan linen stock so each staff member has sets in use, in the laundry and in reserve, since every pair needs chlorine disinfection, washing and steam-sterilizer autoclaving between wears. Size large is a common core size; order the XL version for anyone who needs more room, and match the colour to the tunics already in use.
