What Are Phaneuf Uterine Forceps Used For?

Phaneuf forceps are clamps designed for the uterine vessels. The jaws are angled on the flat so they can be placed across the vessel pedicle at the side of the uterus, and the 1 x 2 teeth stop the clamp slipping off once it is closed. The clamp stays in place while the pedicle is cut and a ligature is tied beneath it, and it is then released.

The slightly springy, flexible arms and variable ratchet let the surgeon choose how firmly the clamp closes. After use, confirm that the jaws still align and that each ratchet step engages cleanly. Overseas hospitals arranging lab equipment export from India can order these clamps together with artery forceps and needle holders in one consignment.

Supplier

ScienceLab, the trading name of Jain Scientific Equipments Private Limited, supplies the Phaneuf Uterine Forceps Curved from Ambala, Haryana, to gynaecology and obstetric units, surgical training departments, dealers and importers. Haemostatic clamps are usually bought as part of a wider instrument list, which we can quote as a single offer.
