What Are Orange Nitrile Gloves Used For?

Orange nitrile gloves suit practical sessions and routine jobs where hands come into contact with commonly used laboratory and cleaning chemicals, such as preparing solutions, washing glassware and wiping down benches. The high-visibility colour is helpful in busy preparation rooms, workshops and low-light areas, because a supervisor can see at a glance who is wearing gloves. No glove resists every chemical, so check suitability before working with strong solvents.

Put the gloves on over clean, dry hands and remove them by peeling each one inside-out so any contamination stays inside. Replace a glove straight away after a heavy splash or if it tears. Being powder-free, they leave no powder on samples, glassware or instruments.
