What Are Universal Disinfectant Wipes Used For?

Wipes are the fastest response when something is spilled or a surface needs cleaning between users: pull one out, wipe the bench, tray, keyboard cover or door plate, and discard it. Because the dose is already in the wipe, a student helper, a nurse or a lab assistant gets the same result as a trained cleaner, and nothing has to be carried except the pack itself.

Use a fresh wipe for each area rather than spreading dirt from one surface to the next, keep the pack closed so the wipes do not dry out, and put used wipes in a lined bin instead of a sink or drain. Schools that run lab practicals every day find that a pack on each bench makes the end-of-lesson wipe-down quick; this is a simple part of waste disposal and hygiene planning in any lab in India.
