Typical Use

The Rover suits two jobs. First, fast transport: taking supplies quickly from ward to ward, from a central store to an outpatient clinic, or between buildings on a hospital or college campus where the route includes ramps, rough paths or stairs. Second, temporary storage: parked in one place, it serves as a mobile store for a vaccination session, a health camp or a first aid point at a school event, and can be wheeled away when the job is finished.

With two Jumbo Trays, the load space is given over to a small number of large compartments rather than many small ones. Pack heavier items low and centred, keep the load within what one person can control on a slope or staircase, and wipe down the trays between uses to maintain the hygienic standard expected in clinical areas.

Manufacturer

The Rover range is offered by Jain Scientific Equipments Private Limited, a company in Ambala, Haryana, whose trading name is ScienceLab; alongside laboratory equipment, it produces trolleys and storage furniture for healthcare and education. The company profile has more information.
