What Is the Covid Testing Pod Used For?

The pod bank turns an open hall, gym or foyer into five separate testing or vaccination stations within a single footprint. Each bay gives the person being tested a screened space of its own, while staff can see along the row and move quickly from one bay to the next. This layout suits mass testing days at schools, workplace testing and community vaccination sessions where many people need to be seen in a short time.

When planning the floor, allow for the roughly 6000 x 1200 mm bank itself plus a waiting area in front and a clear path for staff. Wipe the aluminium frames and PVC panels between sessions with your site's usual disinfectant; smooth surfaces make this quick. Pair the bank with arrow signs so visitors find a free bay without crowding the entrance.

What to Specify When Ordering

- The number of 5-bay banks required
- The floor area available, so the 6000 mm wide bank fits with room to queue
- Whether another standard size or configuration would suit your space better
- Any signs, partitions or screening equipment to be quoted with the pods
