What Is the Chemical Danger Signs Chart Used For?

Every container in a chemistry store carries warning symbols, and students need to understand them before they open one. A chart on this subject helps a teacher explain what hazard symbols stand for — for example flammable, corrosive, toxic, oxidising, explosive or harmful to the environment — and what precaution each one calls for, from keeping a liquid away from flames to putting on gloves and goggles.

Hang the chart where students see it while collecting reagents, and point to it whenever a new chemical is introduced in a practical. Showing real labelled containers and hazard tape next to it makes the symbols familiar quickly. It belongs on the checklist whenever school chemistry lab equipment is being planned for a new laboratory.

OEM Manufacturer

ScienceLab, the trading name of Jain Scientific Equipments Private Limited, is the OEM of the Signs of Danger of Chemicals chart and manufactures it at its own licensed factory at Saha, Ambala, Haryana. Buying from the maker means a school can later request a matching replacement for a damaged chart, or extra copies for a second laboratory, from the same source — ask us. The chart is supplied factory-direct to institutions, dealers and importers in India and international markets. Learn more on the company profile.
