Description :

Litmus Paper Blue (Product Code: SCI-575/147) is an acid-detecting indicator paper used totest whether a solution or damp gas is acidic in school and college laboratories. Acids turn theblue paper red, while bases and neutral substances leave it blue, so a single piece gives a quickyes-or-no answer on acidity. It is supplied by Jain Scientific Equipments Pvt Ltd (ScienceLab), Ambala, a laboratory equipment supplier in India that provides litmus paper to schools at home and abroad.

What Is Blue Litmus Paper Used For?

Touch a piece with a glass rod dipped in the test liquid: a red colour means the sample is acidic. Because bases and neutral liquids both leave blue litmus unchanged, pair it with red litmus paper — if the red paper turns blue the sample is basic, and if neither changes it is neutral.

Moistened with distilled water, blue litmus paper also identifies acidic gases such as hydrogen chloride and sulfur dioxide at the mouth of a test tube, while chlorine first reddens it and then bleaches it. Handle the paper with dry fingers or forceps and keep the pack closed away from acid fumes, which slowly redden it; this simple habit keeps acid-base indicator practicals reliable.
