What Are Transparent Dice Used For?

Transparent Dice are used wherever a lesson needs a fair, random outcome: probability experiments, number games, mental-arithmetic practice and board games. Pupils roll a die many times, tally the results and compare how often each face appears with the theoretical probability.

The larger sizes are easy for a teacher to hold up during a demonstration and for the whole class to read, while the smallest size suits group games at a desk. Using different colours lets pupils roll two or more dice together and still keep each result separate, a simple way to introduce combined events and sample spaces.
