What Is the Plastic Eye Protector Used For?

Students wear the goggle whenever there is a chance of something reaching the eyes: cutting or bending wire, hammering or filing in a workshop session, heating liquids, or pouring and mixing chemicals in a practical. The flexible body sits close around the eyes while the clear lens keeps the view of scales and apparatus undistorted.

Put the goggle on before the activity starts and keep it on until the bench is cleared. Rinse the lens with water and dry it with a soft cloth — never rub off grit dry — and store each pair separately so lenses do not scratch. Replace any pair whose lens is cracked, and check with your lab safety officer that the goggle suits the particular hazards of your practicals.
