What Are Chemical Resistant Gloves Used For?

In chemistry labs these gloves are worn while preparing and pouring solutions, cleaning up spills and washing glassware with cleaning agents. The listed industrial uses cover battery manufacturing, food processing and automotive manufacturing, where hands meet liquids, fluids and wash-down work. The diamond embossed pattern helps keep hold of wet bottles and containers.

No glove resists every chemical, so check the safety data sheet for each substance and ask us about the chemicals you use before relying on this glove. Inspect it for swelling, cracks or discolouration, rinse the outside before taking it off, and remember that it contains natural rubber latex.

Supplier

ScienceLab, the trading name of Jain Scientific Equipments Private Limited in Ambala, Haryana, supplies these neoprene-over-latex gloves to chemistry departments, college labs, industrial training centres and dealers. We source them to go with the chemistry glassware, aprons and safety items that labs already order from us, for delivery in India and international markets. Our company profile has more about the business.
