What Is the Disposable Isolation Gown Used For?

An isolation gown is put on over normal clothing before entering an area where that clothing should stay separate from samples, patients or spills, and it is taken off and thrown away when the task ends. Pathology and clinical labs, hospital wards, sample-collection points and the skills labs of medical and nursing colleges use gowns like this for short procedures, visitor cover and training sessions.

Tie the neck first and then the waist so the gown lies flat across the back, and follow your facility's own procedure for removing and discarding protective clothing. Hospitals and colleges that buy from one lab consumables supplier in India often order these gowns together with gloves and masks, so every shift starts with a complete set.

Supplier

Jain Scientific Equipments Private Limited trades as ScienceLab and supplies this disposable isolation gown from Ambala, Haryana, to hospitals, diagnostic laboratories, medical and nursing colleges, and dealers in India and international markets. The gown is a sourced item in our protective-wear range, so ask us for the material and batch details of the gowns offered with your quotation. Company background is on the ScienceLab profile page.
