What Is the Cotton Lab Coat Used For?

A cotton lab coat is the everyday garment for school and college practicals: pupils put it on before chemistry, biology or physics sessions so that stains, dilute reagents and dust land on the coat rather than on uniforms. Cotton is comfortable over school clothes in warm labs and stands up to frequent laundering.

The four colours give schools a simple system — one colour per class, house or subject, or white for staff and a colour for students. Lock-stitched seams and plastic buttons suit coats that are washed and handed out term after term. Schools placing a school lab equipment bulk supply order often add a set of coats for each new batch of students.
