Description :

Human Nose Model (Product Code: SLE/A/41) enlarges the external nose and nasal cavityabout 3× life size and separates into 5 parts, so that the intricate bones and the mucous-membrane lining of the cavity can be opened up and examined. Individual cartilages and bonesare coloured, making it easy to tell the flexible framework of the nose apart from its bony support.ENT, anatomy, nursing and senior biology classes use it for the upper respiratory tract and thesense of smell. It is made by Jain Scientific Equipments Pvt Ltd (ScienceLab), Ambala,among the human anatomical models manufacturers in India.

Typical Use

The nasal cavity is a complicated space of thin bones and folded lining that is almost impossible to appreciate from a flat drawing. Opening this model part by part lets students see how the external cartilages give the nose its shape, where bone takes over, and how the mucous membrane covers the cavity walls to warm and moisten incoming air. The colour coding helps learners separate cartilage from bone at a glance.

ENT and nursing tutors use the model when explaining nasal packing, nosebleeds and common obstructions, while school teachers bring it into lessons on breathing and smell. Keep the 5 parts together on the base between classes, and check that each piece is seated correctly when reassembling so the model presents the cavity in its true orientation.
