What Is the Hip Joint Model Used For?

The hip is the textbook example of a ball-and-socket joint, and a life-sized model shows its depth and strength far better than a diagram. Teachers use it to explain why the hip is more stable than the shoulder, to trace the ligaments that wrap the joint and resist over-extension, and to discuss where fractures of the femoral neck occur in elderly patients. Because it is a right hip, it also works well for orientation exercises in which students identify anterior, posterior, medial and lateral before naming structures.

As one of the more practical biology teaching aids for the skeletal system, the one-piece build means the model can be passed around a seminar group without parts going missing. It suits college tutorials, physiotherapy practicals and revision sessions before anatomy examinations.

OEM Manufacturer

Jain Scientific Equipments Private Limited, which trades as ScienceLab, is the OEM (original equipment manufacturer) of this hip joint model and produces it at its own licensed factory at Saha, Ambala, Haryana, India, rather than sourcing it from a trader. Medical and nursing colleges, schools, dealers and importers therefore deal directly with the maker for quotations and repeat orders. For vendor registration, the company's GSTIN is 06AAECJ8618A1ZT and its Legal Entity Identifier (LEI) is 3358004HRD1JIVXKYX49. More about the business is on the ScienceLab company profile.
